

---

---

DLO DAILY MEDIA UPDATE

---

---

CURRENT NEWS 11 MARCH 2011

Instructors Strive for Realism at Civilian Course

As an instructor for the Civilian Expeditionary Workforce's predeployment training here, it's Aylward's job to prepare civilians from varying backgrounds and levels of expertise for yearlong deployments to locations around the world, including Afghanistan and Iraq. The program formally stood up in January 2009 to supplement military forces in Iraq, and later on, Afghanistan.

Air Force Culture and Language Center announces upcoming LEAP selection board

The Air Force Culture and Language Center would like to announce the next Language Enabled Airman Program selection board. Application criteria will be released on July 5, 2011, and application packets will be accepted through Sept. 5. LEAP aims to create a cadre of general purpose force Airmen with the necessary language, region and cultural capabilities to influence mission success and meet current and future requirements. Throughout the career-long program, participants are provided structured language sustainment and enhancement opportunities in an effort to develop them as foreign language-enabled professionals and leaders.

Cave Creek Unified seeks to expand foreign language instruction

The Cave Creek Unified School District wants to expand its world language program to every K-8 student, including daily instruction for seventh- and eighth-graders. Currently, language instruction is a patchwork at the elementary schools, with middle-school students taking Spanish or French as an elective. The proposal, presented to the governing board Tuesday night, would have every K-6 student take 20 to 30 minutes of Mandarin or Spanish twice a week. Mandarin, Spanish or French would be a core subject at Sonoran Trails Middle School, along with math, reading, writing, social studies and science. The existing Spanish immersion programs at Desert Willow and Sonoran Trails would not be affected.

Register kids for free foreign language introduction at UW-Eau Claire

The University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire department of foreign languages will host a series of foreign language classes for elementary school students. The free language classes will be held on campus and taught by UW-Eau Claire students enrolled in the "Teaching Foreign Languages in Grades 1-9" course. Classes offered will include beginning French, beginning Spanish and continuing Spanish. "There is an interest in foreign languages for children, and at present there are not ongoing opportunities in the regular elementary school day," said Dr. Paul Hoff, UW-Eau Claire professor of Spanish and foreign language education. "These classes will whet their appetite for further language study. They will spark interest in another language and culture."

Open House Thursday for Spanish Immersion kindergarten

Parents interested in Spanish immersion programs for their young children now have a kindergarten option. An open house will be held tonight for a new Spanish immersion kindergarten class to be offered in September by Su Escuela, a language academy currently based in Cohasset and Duxbury. The academy, which offers adult language lessons, young adult enrichment classes and popular preschool immersion programs, will offer the Hingham kindergarten class with a combination of Spanish and English instruction.

Foreign Language Students Skyping with Students in France

Typically students in Madame Carole Ogden's class come in to class, tend to the daily bellwork, and daily assignments, but today's class was much different. Students in French class were given the opportunity to Skype with an actual high school class in France. Despite some connection issues the video was clear in both image and sound. The French students were eager to hear our French, as the students here were to hear their English. The French students had prepared individual presentations over popular culture and themselves. Next time Madame Ogden's class will have the opportunity to give presentations.

Thornton mum flees Libya thanks to Arabic language skills of daughter

A Thornton mum who fled war-torn Libya with her two infants still in their pajamas has praised her six-year-old daughter's Arabic skills for saving her life. Alisha speaks the language as she has learned it for six months at school in Libya. She told the taxi driver where to go in Arabic - I couldn't have done it without her."

PREVIOUS NEWS

Senior Defense Personnel Join the Effort in Afghanistan

Senior Department of Defense civilian employees recently concluded training at Muscatatuck Urban Training Center, Ind., in preparation for deployment to Afghanistan later this year as part of the Ministry of Defense Advisor program. The program is a seven-week course designed to give these volunteers the tools necessary to help the Afghan Ministry of Defense and Ministry of Interior build their capacity to sustain a professional and accountable security apparatus, said Kelly Uribe, director of the Ministry of Defense Advisors program.

IU-National Guard partnership teaches officers Afghan languages, demonstrates winning approach

Last year a call went out to the brightest ROTC students across the nation -- and they answered. Recent graduates from Harvard, Indiana University, Virginia Tech and other universities traveled to a gritty urban-stylized National Guard facility in southeastern Indiana to immerse themselves in Afghan culture and language. The inaugural Second Lieutenant Afghan Language Program, offered through a burgeoning collaboration between the Indiana National Guard and Indiana University, was intense, effective and an encouraging sign of the potential for highly specialized training to prepare military service personnel from across the country for international deployments.

ROTC Offers Skills-Based Bonus

The ROTC Skill Proficiency Bonus Program pays a skill proficiency bonus to qualified ROTC students who take foreign language or culture classes. Students can earn as much as $3,000 per year, depending on the classes they take. The highest stipends are paid for advanced-level classes in high-demand, strategic languages such as Chinese, Japanese, Arabic, Swahili, Uzbek, Dari and Pashto. Students do not have to be language or linguistics majors to qualify for bonuses. ROTC students at colleges that do not offer foreign languages may be able to study at neighboring school's foreign language program and still receive the bonus.

Course Readies Civilians for Overseas Deployments

Each month, dozens of students converge here for the Civilian Expeditionary Workforce's predeployment course. The course aims to equip civilians with the skills needed to successfully support combat and humanitarian missions in Afghanistan, Iraq and other locations around the world. The students spend the first week here, participating in classes and a series of scenarios that expose them to different cultures and ways of life. They're taught cultural awareness and sensitivities, personal security, counterinsurgency, command structures, how to work with an interpreter, as well as how to become part of a team comprising primarily military members.

Fluent in another language? The CIA wants you

Many Americans don't learn a second or a third language from birth, let alone a language that the CIA or U.S. Foreign Service might want. The situation has forced U.S. government agencies to learn how to cultivate the most talented second-language speakers from among college students with little to no other-language expertise. "In U.S. education, we don't develop early bilinguals," said Catherine Doughty, a language expert at the University of Maryland. "We're dealing with monolinguals or people who have only studied foreign language, so that they don't really have any proficiency."

Panel Recommends Ways to Improve Military Diversity

The commission also recommended a new, broader definition of "diversity" that would add backgrounds and skills largely missing from today's military, such as recruiting people from more varied regions and cultural backgrounds and with foreign-language skills and higher math, science and technological abilities.

Capitol rally focuses on DREAM Act, more foreign language education

More than 1,200 Illinois Muslims rallied at the Illinois Capitol on Wednesday, advocating legislative reforms such as teaching Arabic in public schools. "We are currently witnessing a time in our country's history where the ugly face of bigotry is sweeping across the nation," spokeswoman Janaan Hashim said. "The issues we raise today focus not for a better Muslim community, but for a better Illinois."

Students Take Part in Foreign Language Week

"We also have on the morning announcements, depending on what country is being honored for that day. Have them say hello in Spanish, hello in Polish, hello in Italian, hello in Chinese," said Rienan. The lessons go beyond the class room they are in the cafeteria too, where students get a different lunch every day this week.

Global Learning Scales Up

Becoming more global is a familiar refrain for many a school administrator or curriculum developer wrestling with delivering 21st century skills. Over the past decade, districts have expanded their foreign language programs, added Mandarin Chinese to the mix, and in some cases launched language immersion classes in their elementary schools. Others have opened entire schools designed around international education.

Japan launches primary push to teach English

Compulsory foreign language lessons start next month for all 10- to 12-year-olds, raising hopes among educators and industry leaders of ending a decades-long 'English deficit'. The new curriculum is to be introduced after intense lobbying from the business community, amid fears that Japan's competitive edge could be blunted unless it takes English communication as seriously as China and South Korea.

Sweetwater's biliteracy effort is growing

A novel biliteracy program at the Sweetwater Union High School District is becoming more popular and is attracting the attention of a statewide education group that would like to see the effort expand elsewhere in California. The Sweetwater district is the only one in the county and just one of 33 in the state to offer qualifying students the seal of biliteracy on their diploma. The distinction is meant to show mastery in more than one language.

Khalil Hall Dedication Ceremony

Congressman Sam Farr, DLIFLC Commandant Col. Danial Pick, and family members of the late Alfie Khalil were on hand March 4 at the Presidio of Monterey for the dedication and ribbon cutting ceremony of the DLIFLC's newest general instruction building, Khalil Hall. Khalil began as an Arabic instructor at the Defense Language Institute Foreign Language Center in 1979 and became the president of the American Federation of Government Employees from 1989 until his death in 2006.

The Consortium for Language Teaching and Learning

Links to language centers, national foreign language resource centers (Title VI), language consortia, and International Educational Exchange Organizations.

'Ga-Ga' for Daddy's Data

MIT Professor Deb Roy studied ways caregivers influence how babies learn to talk by bringing his work home. He wired his house with 11 cameras and 14 microphones so he could analyze hours of footage to learn how his son acquired language in real life.